lowa's Senator Finishes His Speech-England's Attitude Alarms Him-Evidence From Mr. Blaine's Book.

Senator Allison yesterday finished his speech against the tariff bill. He began thus: "Here we have a dissertation from the majority of the finance committee on the beauty and loveliness of ad valorem duties: and yet, when we come to the great industries of iron and steel, coal and iron ore, we find that this ad valorem system is blown to the winds and we have specific duties. And I may say, without fear of successful contradiction, that these specific duties on these articles are in the bill because the people who produce them in the United States know (as the finance committee must have been concerned) that ad valorem rates would be no measure of protection and encouragement to them."

He read from Mr. Blaine's Thirty Years in Congress to refute Mr. Voorhees' quotation from the same text. Mr. Voorhees, in his recent speech, had declared that the country had enjoyed unusual prosperity under the Walker tariff act, but Mr. Allison declared that that prosperity, as was well known, had ended in 1857, and from that time forward there was deep and widespread distress. He quoted from the message of President Buchanan to Congress, in 1858, in which it was said that our manufacture were suspended, our private enterprises of different kinds were abandoned and thousands of men were thrown out of employment and were in want.

Mr. McPherson inquired whether the Sen-Mr. McPherson inquired whether the Senator from Iowa was to be understood as maintaining that the very small reduction made in the tariff from 1846 to 1857 had the effect of throwing the country into economic and commercial distress.

"My observations were intended to show," replied Mr. Allison, "that the prosperity which followed the tariff act of 1846 was due to cuttide and extraneous circumstances as to outside and extraneous circumstances, as so well stated by Mr. Blaine, and that these extrinsic influences having exhausted them-selves in 1857, the Walker tariff act pro-duced the distress mentioned by Mr.Buchanan in 1857. It was the first time it had had an opportunity to act on the people of the United States without outside and extraneous influences."

Two Duties.

He severely arraigned the action of the inance committee in imposing a specific duty on coal, iron ore and sugar, while imposing an ad valorem duty on other articles, and inferred that this was because the people engaged in producing sugar, coal and fron ore knew that an ad valorem duty would not afford them any protection, and had sufficient influence to obtain the imposition of a specific duty. "Here," he continued, sarcastically, "is a dissertation from the majority of this committee on the beauties and loveliness of ad valorem duties for the purpose of raising revenue, but yet, when it comes to the great questions of coal, sugar, iron ore, &c., we see that this ad valorem system is thrown to the winds, and we have specific duties."

Mr. Allison, in discussing the specific duty on rice, compared it with the ad valorem duty on window glass and beer, and showed that the equivalent ad valorem duty on rice would be much higher than either, arguing that the framers of the provision must have  felt that rice was more of a luxury than

Senator McPherson pointed out that the ley duty on window glass would be about twice as much as the duty on window glass in the pending bill.

Questions and Answers Some controversy followed Mr. Allison's criticism of the "blind" way of estimating the revenue to be derived from the bill by basing that estimate on the importations of last year, and he likened the bill to a mole burrowing in the earth without knowing where it would come out. Senator Vest said that no man who was not inspired (and the days of inspiration were over in the democratic party, he said.) OILY SKIN, SCARS,

BLACK HEADS, AND ALL BLEMISHES could predict what the importation would In response to a question, Senator Allison declared that he intended to vote for free sugar, both raw and refined, as it was in placing the bounty on sugar, as it was in the McKinley law.

He then branched out into a discussion of the silver question, as the tariff bore on it, maintaining that this country was following the footsteps of Great Britain. She was losing her trade now because of her dealings with India, and she was losing her trade there, and in all oriental countries, because of the position of England with regard to silver. The looms of Manchester England Drawn In.

"And now we propose to surrender our markets to Great Britain," he continued, earnestly, "in order that she may take our gold to fight her battles against the world. We are to allow the wool growers of Australia to come in here without opposition and compete with the wool grower of Montana, sending to Australia from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 in gold to enable one of England's colonies to continue the fight against the world in opposition to a double standard."

In conclusion he asserted that as a Sen-ator of the United States he should not knowingly contribute by this bill or any other to promoting the interests of Great Britain at the sacrifice of the interests of but yielded the floor to Senator Mills, with the understanding that he should not thus yield his right to it tomorrow morning. Senator Mills spoke for about half an hour, confining himself principally to a defense of the ad valorem system of taxation, which, he said, was indorsed by Secretary Carlisle as well as by Secretary Walker. The value of all articles made by human labor, he asserted, and especially those nade by machinery, were falling all over the world, and had been falling for fifty or sixty years, but under a specific system of taxation no change would be made in the duty on such articles on that account. He declared specific duties to be unjust, un-American and un-democratic. unjust, un-American and un-democratic. In reply to a question by Mr. Allison he retorted: "Why, when the tariff commission appointed by President Arthur had advocated a duty of 15 per cent on hides, was the duty afterward taken off? It was because you New England people demanded it. You must come to the confessional and I must come to the confessional," he continued. "We cannot pass our bill without making some concessions. I am between making some concessions. I am between the devil and the deep sea, and when it is a question of going to the devil by keeping the McKinley law, or of going to sea and trusting to some faverable wind to blow me back to land, I am going to sea."

WHOLESALE GROCERIES. One Man Does His Pilfering With

Several days ago Johnston Bros., grocers, on 7th street northwest between G and H streets, made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors, but it appears that persons other than the creditors have received benefit from the stock. One of them is a negro named Tom Harrison, who had worked about the place when the firm was in good condition financially, and when misfortune overtook his employers he thought he would reap a harvest. He did so, but he got caught, and now he will have to pay the penalty. Tom had a key to the rear cellar door of the store and after the United States marshal took charge of the stock he visited the place, so it is charged, and carried off a large quantity of groceries. Nearly a wagon load of groceries, including several sacks of flour, two tubs of lard, twenty shoulders and hams and a large quantity of smaller articles, such as are found in grocery stores. In all there was Detective Carter investigated the case and this morning he went to the house of a col-ored woman named Miranda Toms, in Bates alley in rear of the grocery store and recov-ered the missing property mentioned. Tom Harrison lives there and he was arrested for the alleged theft. It is charged that most of the property was taken between 12 and 1 o'clock Monday morning. Harrison admitted to the officer that he went to the place Monday morning and watched while a companion brought out went to the place Monday morning watched while a companion brought out the plunder. He said he was induced by the plunder to do what he did. The his companion to do what he did. The property was taken to police headquarters Anton Fischer, 306 G ST. N.W. and held as evidence and Harrison was locked up on a charge of burglary. He will be taken to the Police Court tomorrow.

Senators Allison and Mills Have Extremely WHAT WILL FARRELL DO? The Famous Ball Player Will Come

It is Said, Here. has decided to leave for Wasnington tomorrow or the next day, having given up all hope of coming to terms with Manager Ward of New York.

According to Manager Ward there is possibility of the deal being leclared off, whereby New York paid the Messrs. Wagner $7,500 for Farrell and Meekin, and threw in Petty and McMahon for good measure. In thinking the matter over yesterday Ward came to this conclusion:

"As the battery was purchased for $7,500 outright, and nothing was specified as to the worth of either player, it would be im-possible to determine how much of the $7,500 should be returned to the New York Club for Farrell. The Wagners have al-ways looked for the best end of everything, and they would have an excellent change. and they would have an excellent chance to and they would have an excellent chance to put the screws on in this case. Consequently, if Farrell does not come to our terms, the New York Club will probably declare the whole deal off. That would give back our $7.500 which N. E. Young holds, together with Pitcher Petty and Catcher McMahon, while Meekin and Farrell would have to go her to Washington.

have to go back to Washington.
"I'm not bluffing when I say this. Meekin is a good pitcher, I'll admit, and I should hate to lose him, but the team already has four good pitchers. So you see if it comes to a pinch we can do very well without Meekin and Farrell."

In regard to Farrell's threat to sign a Washington contract this week, unless he hears from the New York Club that his terms have been accepted, both Manager Schmelz and Mr. J. Earl Wagner said that Farrell must play in New York or nowhere. It has been argued that if he cannot agree upon terms with the New York Club he can sign with the Washington Club, and President Young will have to return the purchase money or part of it to the New York Club, for it is claimed that no player can be forced to go to another club by selling his services for gold.

The persons who make these claims are merely considering the matter from a purely legal standpoint. They do not under-stand that the league clubs will all stand logether, and that Washington will not be allowed to play Farrell against the other teams of the circuit. According to the eague's way of looking at it, Farrell beongs to New York, and must play ball ere or quit.

Mr. Schmelz also stated that the Wash-Mr. schmeiz also stated that the washington contract which Farrell claims to have in his possession does not contain the signature of a single official of the Washington club, and therefore it is of no more value than a piece of blank paper.

HOME RULE FOR SCOTLAND. Its Desirability Admitted by the House of Commons.

Mr. James Heary Dalziel (liberal), member for Kirkcaldy district, offered a motion in the British house of commons on Tuesday, affirming the Jes.rability of establishing a legislature for Scotland to deal with purely Scottish affairs Mr. John Herbert Lewis (liberai), member for the Flint district, moved an amendment that a legislature be established for Wales also. Sir G. O. Trevelyan, secretary for Scotland, said that the government declined at present to go further than support the bill creating a Scotch standing committee.

He added that he intended personally to support Mr. Dalziel's motion and that the government left its followers free to exercise their own judgment in the matter.

Mr. A. J. Balfour, the conservative leader, ridicaled the action of the secretary for Scotland in supporting a home rule motion while he was answerable for the bill to create a Scotch standing committee on which the house had not yet acted.

Mr. Dalziel's motion was carried by a vote of 180 to 170. Sir William Harcourt, the government leader, and the principal members of the cabinet, were absent during the debate.

CLOSE CALL FOR THE PRINCE. Nearly Killed by a Railway Train at Marseilles.

The Paris correspondent of the London Daffy News says: The Prince of Wales has arrived in Paris While the prince's train was at the Marseilles station the prince lingered too long at the buffet.

The train started, and the prince just suc ceeded in clutching the rall of the saloon carriage. As the prince appeared to be in danger the station master signaled to the engine driver and the train was stopped. The London Daily Chronicle's Paris correspondent says that only the vigilance of the engineer of the train prevented a probably fatal accident to the Prince of Wales

After the meal one of the occupants of the same table was so incensed that he knocked the offender down the steps and being his offender down the steps and broke his neck. This is no romance. What I wish to convey is the impression
I have that such a general interest in the present crusade shows an immense amount of dissatisfaction with present conditions on the part of the people which will eventually, and I believe shortly, become organized antagonism to the present modes of government favored by both of the old political parties. This, I think, will take the shape of a combination of the pro-ducers on political lines that will follow ducers on political lines that will follow those of the populist party without going off at acute angles of crankiness every now and then. The revolution will be fought by ballots, not bullets, and that it is impending I cannot keep feeling morally certain of.'

"It is wonderful how people in a new country amalgamate and adapt themselves to circumstances and to each other," said months ago thousands of homeseekers, severe weather, the sensational stories of distress that reached the east were greatly over-wrought. During the thirty days thousands of settlers who had gone to their old homes after their families have been returning, and in every direction the prairie schooner, loaded with servitors, supplies and people, could be seen bringing in its precious burden.

"Tough element? Not a bit of it. In our thriving little city of Enid we have as truch intelligence, education and refinement as can be found anywhere among the same number of people. Our public schools are in operation, and the ladies who were appointed as teachers all made averages of ninety-four per cent and upward in the malliward in the public competition examina

"Socially we have the same amusements that obtain in the east. Every Wednesday night the young people's dancing class meets and numbers from eighty to ninety couples on the floor. Masonic, Odd Fellow, Knights of Pythias and other lodges are in operation and the same standard excuses for being out and the same standard excuses for being out late at night obtain there as here in Wash-"Yes, the strip is full of politics and poli ticians, but it is too early to determine its political complexion. City election took place today, but the results cannot reach me for a few days. Of course, my past af-fillations prompt me to look forward to lemocratic successes, even the weather has been a little frosty of late. "They laugh at us for being slow and sedate," said Robert Irvine of Philadelphia at La Normandie yesterday, "but no one can find anything in our culture"

We presence in town has no political significance. I am here solely on law business connected with the interests of clients at Enid and vicinity. The railroad question is, I believe, still unsettled, so far as the depot question is concerned, but the enterprising business men of this booming little town have in hand a fund of $30,000 to offer as a bonus to any road giving us connection with Arkansas City and let for our produce. They are full of push and will keep up with the procession in any business enterprise that promises the good of the town, and you will always find that they keep step with the bass drum."

It's the Standard Fashion. in washing and cleaning, to use Pearline. Certainly the enormous amount of it used every year proves it. Millions of women use nothing else.

And when you see a fashion so universal, so sensible, and so unchangeable, why not adopt it? There are many things that try to imitate Pearline. Some of them may be more or less successful for a while-but the public is learning. "You can't fool all the people all the time"-and the women who want the best thing to wash with one that is absolutely safe, will continue to use Pearline-made by James Pyle, N. Y.
